

MYSTERY STILL SHROUDS FLEET

Both The Russian And Japanese War Vessels
Have Been Lost Sight Of Today.

ONLY RUMORS HAVE BEEN HEARD

Now Certain That No Naval Battle Has As Yet Taken Place—Rojestvensky Awaits His Fresh Supplies.

(SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE.)
Hongkong, April 15.—A number of colliers from Cardiff and Durban
arrived here and are awaiting orders.
It is believed the coal is intended for Rojestvensky.

No Reports
Amoy, China, April 15.—No reports of the whereabouts of the Russian fleet have reached here. The official here say it is certain the Russian warships have not entered Formosa
straits.

Still Wait on Naval Battle

London, April 15.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says Russian naval experts agree that the naval battle must be fought off Formosa.
The Russians may have been slightly retarded by coaling and by waiting for the return of the hospital
ship Orel, which delivered and received dispatches at Saigon, besides shipping stores.

The movements since April 11 of Rojestvensky's fleet have not been reported authentically. The absence of news concerning this fleet and the impenetrable secrecy of the Japanese movements increase the keen interest
with which the naval fight is anticipated. Some naval officers assume that Rojestvensky has altered
his course since April 11, otherwise
he now would be near Hongkong, and would have been inevitably reported
by passing vessels.

News Fails to Leak
Correspondents in Tokyo are unable to learn anything about the Russians.
It is supposed there that they are steaming north.

The Tokyo correspondent of the Telegraph says Japan is determined to insist upon the observance of strict neutrality by all powers having eastern territory. If neutrality is seriously infringed and Japan's protests
ignored, she will take strong independent action.

BLACK PLAGUE HITS A BIG MINING CAMP

Robust Persons Most Susceptible to Disease That Is Spreading Death
Among Citizens of Tonopah.

Reno, Nev., April 15.—Hundreds of people have flocked into Reno on the Virginia & Truckee train, fleeing
from a sickness prevalent at Tonopah.
Every train for a week has been crowded.

Guy Sparks will appoint a special commission and send the members to Tonopah. The men will co-operate with the physicians of the camp and
at once begin a campaign to check
the disease that is mowing down people at the rate of from five to twenty-five each day.

In one day twelve bodies were stretched out on slabs in the only undertaking establishment in the camp. An equal number at least were dead around the town. The disease strikes without warning. The healthy are the most susceptible and
in from twelve to twenty-four hours
are dead, the bodies blackened by the mysterious poison that saps their lives away.

GUNS EXPLODE ON BATTLESHIP IOWA

Unconfirmed Rumor Comes From Pensacola—A Loss of Life Is Reported.

(SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE.)
Pensacola, April 15.—A report is current here that two guns exploded
on the battleship Iowa, causing a loss of life. It cannot be verified as yet.

Later News
Washington, April 15.—The navy department was informed this afternoon by a dispatch from Pensacola
that a gun of the battleship Iowa exploded during a target practice and its muzzle was blown off. Nine were injured. The gun had been fired 103
times.

American in Guatemala Jail.
New York, April 15.—Strong representations in behalf of Joseph F. Darling, who for a month has been imprisoned in a Guatemala jail, will be made to the state department in Washington by friends from New York.

Big Bill for Toys.
The children of the United States
each year consume toys that cost at retail $45,000,000.

The Tokyo correspondent of the Telegraph further says that several days ago the government of Formosa refused to grant the application of an Osaka company to suspend its steamship service between Japan and Formosa in view of the approach of the Baltic fleet. The government based its refusal on the ground that the company's anxiety was premature.

A dispatch from Tokyo says that the imperial ordinance which declares Makung harbor on the Pescadores islands in a state of siege, became operative April 14. This is taken as an indication that Togo with his heavy fighting ships is at Makung.
Japs. in Makung Harbor.
A British naval officer who knows
the China sea well says that Makung harbor is an ideal place for torpedo operations. The harbor is located in the southwest part of the largest of the Pescadores and has a safe anchorage which runs back three miles, so that it is quite sheltered even from typhoons. He thinks that the fact that the Japanese have now revealed
this position indicates that they are satisfied that there is no longer any possibility of Rojestvensky's hearing of it before he arrives in the straits of Formosa, the southern entrance of which he must now be nearing, unless he has veered his course to the eastward.

Discredit Rumor of Battle.
The rumor that the fleets had clashed in battle, spread throughout the European capitals. April 14, is generally discredited. The report arose from the fact that Rojestvensky
sent the hospital ship, the Orel, into the French port of Saigon with a number of sick men from the fleet. The Orel left dispatches with the Russian consul, but dispatches from St. Peter-burg say they contained no reference to any wounded men.

STONE CAME THRO' THE WINDOW PANE

Missile of Dimensions of Fair Sized Potato Landed in Joseph Rauen's Office Last Night.

White Manager Joseph Raue, A.
Golling, and M. Southmayd of Milwaukee were sitting in the Singer
sewing machine office on the Corn Exchange at five minutes past nine
last evening, a rock of the dimensions of a fair-sized potato crashed
through the window-pane on the south side of the entrance-way. The men jumped from their chairs, ran to the door, and swept the entire locality
with their eyes without discovering any evidence of the source from which the missile had come. Indeed no man or boy was visible on the square. Mr. Raue immediately notified Marshal Comstock by telephone and ten minutes later the officers were on the scene. Patrolman Bear had passed through the alley that runs from Franklin to Jackson
streets and alongside the city hall
just two minutes before, seeing nothing that would arouse his suspicions.
Yet the alley with its opening on the square in the rear of Assembly
block was the obvious course of refuge for anyone throwing a stone.
This one did, unless, indeed, it came from the top of the building. The velocity of the missile was something terrific. It cut a clean hole about two inches and a half in diameter
through the thick glass, without shattering or splintering the balance of the pane. One theory offered is that the stone was hurled by the hoof of a horse but the men who were in the store are quite certain that no rig passed by at the time.
Mr. Raue says that he knows of no enemy who might be trying to do him
injury and he is unable to offer any solution of the mystery.

MORE TESTIMONY AS TO OIL TRUST

Commissioner Garfield Is at Humboldt, Seeking New Evidence
This Afternoon.

(SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE.)
Chanute, Kas., April 15.—Commissioner Garfield left for Humboldt today to interview ex-Senator Stewart,
a member of the executive committee of the Oil Producers' association,
and C. D. Webster, owner of the Webster refinery. It is said both men have important testimony to offer as to the methods of the Standard in Kansas. Garfield's three assistants examined a number of Chanute producers today. The investigators will remain in this vicinity for several days.

lorado with His Special Party.

New Castle, Colorado, April 15.—
The President and his party arrived here at 7:45 this morning. He was greeted by a thousand people. The President was eating breakfast when the special pulled in, but he went to the rear platform and delivered a ten-minute address. After breakfast
the party accompanied by guides
started for the first hunting camp,
fifteen miles south of here.

FIGHT TO FINISH IS THE ORDER NOW

Striking Teamsters of the Ward and Company Will Allow No Compromise.

(SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE.)
Chicago, Ill., April 15.—After a fruitless effort to reach an agreement with Montgomery Ward & Co., the union labor leaders left the mayor's office at noon, declaring the fight
with the employers of Chicago was
"to a finish." The prospect of peace is now more remote than ever. Police guarded the caravans of wagons
today. There were some demonstrations, but no arrests were made.

LESS WHEAT GROWS IN INDIANA NOW

Cereal Will Soon Cease to Be Important Factor With Hoosier Farmers, Who Turn to Other Products.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 15.—The state statistician has figures that show
alarming conditions in wheat production in Indiana, indicating that it will soon cease to be important. The average has fallen to one-third of what it usually was. In Howard county there are but 1,600 acres sown in wheat,
against 8,000 in previous years.

Tipton county produced 17,657 acres
of wheat in 1902. The yield was 240-811 bushels. The following year 2,837 bushels were sown and a yield of 24, 694 harvested. This year there are only about 600 acres in the entire county in wheat.

Benton county produced 306,636
bushels of wheat in 1900. The grain averaged twelve bushels to the acre,
but the two years following interest
in the growing of this grain waned so much that for two years there has been scarcely any wheat grown in the entire county.

The other counties, with the exception of Benton, have tried the production of wheat to about the same extent as Howard county. For the last three years Benton county has been raising more than 80,000 acres of oats and about 100,000 acres of corn.

Clew for the Police.
Paris, April 15.—Frank C. Marrin,

delphia, is reported to have landed
at Havre March 23.

Almost Kills Children.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, April 15.—A reward of $100 has been offered by the citizens of Fort Dodge for the arrest of the person guilty of distributing poison about the town. The poison evidently was aimed at dogs, but several children have experienced narrow escapes,
one child having a poisoned biscuit in its mouth when detected. Thirty dogs have been killed, including valuable hunting dogs.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES

ca April 16.

tion of Senator O. H. Platt, who is ington, was again reported.

eau of insular affairs at Washington
and will be an assistant to the superintendent in charge of Filipino students in the United States. Father Vattman spent a great deal of time
in the Philippines.

CLEVER WORK IN BEEF CASE

Packers' Chief Clerk Brought Back From Canada By A Clever Detective.

A TRICKY SECRET SERVICE MAN

Government Detective Passes An Employee Of A Kansas
City Packing House And A Fugitive.

Chicago, April 15.—All the correspondence embracing it is said secret instructions of an incriminating
character—between Schwarzschild & Sulzberger and Edwin B. Fish, chief clerk of the company's traffic department, while Fish was in Canada,
was turned over Friday to United States District Attorney Morrison.
This correspondence bears on Weissenbach and his three fellow employes
who were indicted on Thursday.

It was captured by a secret service
man who posed as a fellow prisoner of Fish. The story exceeds in interest
the one that culminated a few days
ago in the seizure of six trunks containing records of the Elma Trading company from vaults in the First National Bank building.

Letters Are Important.
The correspondence consists of a great extent of confidential letters written on plain paper, way bills, and other literature. The exact nature of it could not be learned from the federal authorities, but its importance
may be conjectured from the fact that Attorney Morrison and his assistants
spent considerable time in studying
it, and that most of it was submitted to the grand jury.

John D. Maher of the government
secret service is the man who captured Fish and the papers, and it is still believed around the Monadnock
building by those not in the secret that Maher is J. M. Gray, traveling auditor for one of the packing houses,
with headquarters in Kansas City.

Detective Is Clever.
Maher, who came to Chicago from Washington, was detailed to locate Fish and the five other witnesses who had eluded the government by crossing the Canadian line.
These men were all enjoying themselves in Quebec, living at the best hotel, playing billiards and going to the theater when Maher struck town.
The detective represented himself as
J. M. Gray and a traveling auditor from Kansas City. He explained that he had left the United States because his testimony was wanted in Chicago, and he had no trouble at all in fraternizing

with the five fugitives.
Lures Fish to Detroit.
Maher remained in Quebec just long enough to learn that Fish was the most important witness of the lot
and to win his confidence.
"Let's take a run down to Detroit,"
said the older man one day.
Fish is 27 years old and impressionable. He agreed to the plan.
At Detroit Fish and Maher were arrested April 9 by another secret service man, with whom Maher had communicated by cipher telegrams, and were brought to Chicago. Maher remained a prisoner and was locked up with Fish in a room at the Majestic
hotel.

"They won't do anything serious to us," said Maher to Fish, who was badly scared, "but they'll watch every move we make. I have a lot of valuable papers on me and I wish I could hide them in a good place."
"I'll bet your papers are no more valuable than mine," answered Fish.
"I've worried about them ever since our arrest. Where can we hide them?"
"We might put them under the mattress," advised Maher.

How Papers Were "Stolen."
Maher stuck a lot of important looking documents under the mattress
and Fish did the same with his papers. When Fish left the room to take a bath Maher took the papers he was after, put them in another hiding place, and then entered the bathroom himself. A few moments later
he left it and made a great row.
"We have been robbed," he shouted. "Someone has got into the room
and has stolen our papers."
Fish did not learn Maher's real identity until both were brought before the grand jury.

Capt. Porter has received information that the remainder of the "beef colony" in Canada would return to Chicago.

FIND AMERICAN ADMIRAL'S REMAINS BURIED IN PARIS

General Porter Discovers The Bones Of The Famous John Paul
Jones.

Paris, April 15.—The body of Paul Jones, the famous admiral of the American revolution, buried in the old St. Louis cemetery in Paris more than a hundred years ago, was found April 14, after a search lasting for five years.

The body will be conveyed to the United States by an American warship, possibly the flagship of the European squadron.
Paul Jones died in poverty and neglect in Paris on July 13, 1792. All record of his burial place was lost years ago. Gen. Horace Porter, the American ambassador, began a search for the body five years ago. After many false clues it seemed certain that the famous admiral had been buried in the old cemetery of St. Louis, a square of ground long since covered with buildings.

Gen. Porter's Work.
Gen. Porter employed a large force of workmen and tunneled and cross-tunneled beneath the basements of the buildings.
Hundreds of wooden caskets were found, but not until April 12 were unearthed four leaden caskets which gave promise of containing the body of the admiral. Three of them bore plates designating the names of the occupants. The fourth coffin was opened in the presence of Gen. Porter, Col. Bally-Blanchard, the second
secretary of the American embassy,
and Engineer Weis, who has been directing the excavation.

The body was found to be well preserved, owing to its being immersed in alcohol. It was wrapped in a sheet, with a packing of straw and
hay. All present were immediately struck by the resemblance of the head to that of the medallions and busts of the admiral.

Uniform Is Lacking.
As was anticipated, no uniform,
decoration or sword was found, as all such articles had been accounted for
after the burial.

The coffin was taken to the medical school, where Drs. Captain and Papil-launt, distinguished professors of the school of anthropology and recognized
authorities on such investigations,
were charged with making a thorough examination for the purpose of identification. To facilitate this the ambassador furnished them with portraits and medallions, two busts by Houdou and authentic descriptions of the color of the admiral's hair and the height and measurement of his body.
After the most minute examination
the following facts were fully substantiated:

Means of Identification.
Length of the body, 5 feet 7 inches;
the admiral's exact height.
Hair dark brown, the same as the admiral's; in places slightly gray, indicating a person of his age, 45 years.
The hair is long, reaching below the shoulders, and is combed back and gathered in a clasp at the back of the neck.
The face is clean shaven, all corresponding exactly with the descriptions, portraits and busts of the admiral.
The linen is in good condition. One article bears an initial, either "J" or an inverted "P."
Finding that all the internal organs
were singularly well preserved, the doctors made an autopsy, which showed distinct proofs of the disease
from which the admiral is known to have died. The identification was pronounced complete in every particular.
The body will be deposited in the receiving vault of the American church on the Avenue de l'Alma until plans for its removal to the United States are completed.

NEWS FOR THE PLAY-GOERS

One of the foremost impersonators of what is known theatrically as "girl boy" parts is Miss Viola Gillette who takes the part of Violetta in "The Girl and the Bandit" which will be seen here at the Myers Grand Saturday, April 22.

She is the prima donna contralto of the newly organized Frank L. Perley Opera company. This company is rated by Mr. Perley himself as one of the greatest singing organizations before the American people today. Its members have been carefully chosen by this great manager from a large list of candidates, and it is safe to say that it is even better than the famous Alice Neilson Opera company which he owned and managed for so many years.

Miss Gillette first came into prominence on the stage in the part of Moving Pictures De Luxe.

Our generation has witnessed some

SCENE FROM "THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR"
Prince Charming with the famous "Beauty and the Beast" production, which ran for a year in New York. In this part, she made a profound impression by her beautiful voice, and was commented upon as the most beautifully formed woman on the American stage. The part did not give her much opportunity to display her real dramatic ability, but Mr. Perley, who seems to have an instinct for such things has cast her for the musical part of Violetta in this beautiful opera. The part is unusual in a comic opera because it involves the sustaining from beginning to end of a sincere and almost tragic love story.

Mrs. A. C. Taylor who has written the book of the opera will be ranked as an emotional writer of great ability as a consequence of this most exquisite story of the loves of Angelo and his Violetta.

In the second act of the opera, disguised as an officer in the army, the most charming woman has an opportunity to display her striking ability in a girl-boy part. With the daintiness and refinement of Alice Neilson, she leads her soldiers in the fight against the bandits for the purpose of rescuing her lover, and is successful.

During the course of the opera she sings several songs which will unquestionably become popular. The best of these is one entitled "The Tale of the Snowflake." Mr. Perley has secured the exclusive rights to it for his opera, and it will not be sung in any other production during the present season. The firm which published it received orders for over 100,000 copies prior to its publication.

Miss Gillette was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, her parents being originally Kentuckians. Although not of the Mormon faith she had so many intimate girl friends, of that persuasion that she holds the distinction of having been admitted to some of the most sacred parts of the famous temple. She was a teacher of music in the public schools of her native city, when she met Jessie Bartlett Davis, and was advised by her to go to New York, and make a further study of the science of sound. She subsequently followed concert and oratoric work, and was finally engaged by Mr. Perley to go with the Neilson Opera Company to London. After the discontinuation of this company, she joined the "Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" and created the part of "Prince Charming" mentioned above.

Upon his return to the operatic field, Mr. Perley immediately thought of the great contralto who had been hidden away as an under-study in the ranks of the Neilson Opera company. Sending for Miss Gillette, he arranged for her to take the part of Violetta in "The Girl and the Bandit."

Miss Gillette has a sweet charming personality that is thoroughly becoming. She lacks entirely that aggressiveness which often is born of a spot light, or the instre of a brilliant "catching." Her success is due to her prosaic hard work and steady, assisted, of course, by a most pleasing personality. It is safe to assume that under the management of direction of Mr. Perley, she will soon become the foremost comic opera contralto of the day, a worthy successor of the sweet voiced Jessie Bartlett Davis.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Ten years ago, in the little town of Grafton, in the northern part of the state, a boy of 16 applied for the school and was engaged as teacher. He was an orphan and for three years had been engaged in fighting the battles of life alone. But he was made of the right material and realizing the value of an education as a foundation for a professional life, on which his ambition had centered, he worked his way through the high school and then secured a position as teacher in order to earn a little money so that he might enter the state university.

Two years later his purpose was accomplished and crowding four years' work into three, he graduated from the literary course in the class of 1899, with the degree of B. L. to his credit.

Without pausing he attacked the three-year course in the university law school, graduating in two years and winning the degree of L. L. B.

At the age of 23 he found himself a full-fledged attorney, so far as book knowledge was concerned, and with an ambition to test himself, he went to Chicago and secured a minor position in the legal department of the Chicago City Railway company.

Two years later he entered the employ of the city attorney and was placed in charge of the damage suit department. This was his opportunity and he was not slow to embrace it.

In the 105 cases which came to him during the next two years, he succeeded in limiting the aggregate damages to $25,000 in judgments against the city.

Then there came to him, what comes to every young man, who seriously prepares for the work of life and enters upon it with a purpose and recognition.

You can no more hide ability than you can hide a star in a cloudless night, and so this young man was being watched by the business world about him.

A few days ago he was called into the office of the president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company, and an hour later William S. Kies, the boy attorney of 27, held a commission as general attorney for this great railway system.

This, in brief, is the history of a Wisconsin boy, who built for himself a foundation, using the material at hand. He was not a favored son of fortune, and the obstacles which beset his pathway are common to the lot of the average American boy.

He discovered, early in life, a secret which many boys fail to discover, and that is that the most direct route to a goal is straight ahead.

The tide in the stream which he navigated ebbed and flowed with monotonous regularity, but he never changed the course of his craft. There were times when every energy was taxed to the limit, but never at a time when any thought was entertained of abandoning his purpose.

Charley Kies had comrades and companions who occupied the same level with him 10 years ago. Some of them fell out by the way early in the race, and others struggled spasmodically, but he never faltered and the prizes of life were captured before he attained the age of 30.

His experience should be an incentive to every American boy.

The young men who fall before they reach middle life, and there is an army of this class, are personally responsible, as a rule, for failure. The most common complaint is, that opportunity does not come their way, but this is the most mistaken notion that any young man can entertain.

The world was never so full of opportunities of every kind as it is today. The trouble is in the lack of ability to recognize and grasp them.

It is estimated that 90 per cent of the men engaged in commercial business fail, at some time during their career, and bankruptcy frequently follows.

While this class of failures are disastrous, there is another class which is more numerous, and from which no statistics have ever been compiled.

This class is represented by young men who fail to make a start in the race of life. They are found by the score in every community, bankrupt in every kind of capital necessary to success.

A life of leisure and mild dissipation has sapped vitality, and it disposed to stem the tide they are physically unable for the conflict.

Their mind is a blank on every question of importance, and if responsibility comes to them they are helpless. The finer sensibilities have been stunted, until a depraved heart represents all that is left of the choicest endowment. This is bankruptcy, worse than commercial failure and much more common.

The boy problem is the great problem of the age. It is more complex than any other with which parents have to deal. Many a father's heart is made sad over the perversity and waywardness of the boy on whom his hopes have centered, while the mother grieves in silence.

The nation suffers as well as society and the home and efforts are being made in some of the larger cities to develop in boys a feeling of responsibility along the lines of good citizenship.

In New York the Juvenile City League has an organization of boys' clubs, started on the middle west side of the city by Miss M. L. Chandler, a leading member of the Woman's Municipal League of New York. The object was to inculcate a proper idea of the citizen's attitude towards a city government by getting the boys to perform simple civic duties. The first of these was to keep the streets of their respective neighborhoods clean and uncluttered.

Mr. William Chauncey Langdon, instructor of history at Pratt Institute, took charge of the work of organization and instruction, and in two months there were in existence forty-two clubs, whose total membership was about one thousand three hundred boys. Every club represented a single block of the neighborhood. The Department of Street Cleaning largely aided the work by placing in each block where there was a club one of its metal cans for the reception of paper, fruit-skins, etc. It encouraged the efforts of the boys and complimented their enthusiasm, and in a short time great results were apparent.

The "club blocks" were in striking contrast to those where the organization did not work. The boys not only cleaned up the rubbish that others threw away, but they refrained from littering the streets themselves, and by example and missionary work influenced others to have a pride in the highways of their neighborhoods.

This is good work so far as it goes. The boys of the land need the helpful influence of the city, the school, the church and the home to stock them with capital for the initial work of life.

The Chicago & Northwestern Railway company has just issued a little book giving a complete history of the road from the date of its organization. The name of the book is "Yesterday and Today." The company employs 40,000 men, and has an annual payroll of $30,000,000. It is doing more for the country than several governors whose names might be mentioned.

The cigarette bill is now a law. It will prove a blessing to the state if it can be enforced but like all prohibitive laws of this class it will prove a dead letter. If a boy is bound to smoke give him a pipe and cure him of the cigarette habit.

The doctors would like to have a law passed against advertising on the part of the profession and such a bill is now pending in the legislature. That comes about as near being a burlesque as anything yet suggested.

If it is worth anything to Wisconsin to be advertised on the Pacific coast, the legislature is making a mistake in not granting a moderate appropriation to the Lewis and Clark exposition.

The first physician summoned to attend the man who died on the street last Thursday night, said that it was a case for the city physician and coolly walked off another way. This sort of medical ethics is a little strenuous.

The new mayor of Chicago is endorsed by W. J. Bryan. That settles it, and the people of the windy city should be satisfied.

Another bachelor tax bill is before the legislature and $10 is the fee provided for single blessedness.

Milwaukee Sentinel: By addressing Dr. Dowle, Mr. Rockefeller may learn of an easy way to bestow money for missionary purposes and no questions asked.

Sheboygan Journal: Five cows were killed by lightning in Scott township last week. When will Sheboygan farmers learn to equip their cows with lightning rods?

Marquette Eagle-Star: Nan Patterson is undecided as to whether she will go on the stage or wash dishes at Sing Sing during the next few years.

St. Paul Globe: The best evidence we have had that President Roosevelt is really in love with the strenuous life lies in the fact that he thinks he is taking a vacation now.

Racine Journal: Peoria, Ill., women lowered themselves greatly the other day when some 200 of them tried to bring fruit, candy and flowers to a scoundrel who had murdered his wife by choking her with a hair ribbon.

Eau Claire Leader: Governor La Follette will deliver fifty Chautauqua lectures this summer. As governor, senator and lecturer our strenuous little executive should be able to keep the wolf from the door.

Appleton Post: John Alexander Dowle values his assets at $21,000,000. Even if his estimate is one-twentieth part true, it shows how amazingly humbuggery thrives in this country, especially under resourceful leadership.

Madison Democrat: The objection to the law permitting spring shooting is that every goose or duck killed is very likely to cut off a whole brood that would be good food in the fall while the one killed in the spring makes no better food than an old rubber shoe.

Marquette Eagle-Star: The Wall Street Journal believes that, thanks to the yellow press, the average individual is possessed of more knowledge than is so than is possessed by the citizens of any citizen of any other country in the world. The Journal may be a little biased.

El Paso Herald: No so much is known about those other Russian patriots whom despotism is crushing beneath its iron heel, but Maxim Gorky's stuff is tolerably well known through the magazines and if he is a fair sample, the bureaucracy is entitled to sympathy.

Milwaukee Daily News: Abdul Hamid is buying large quantities of guns and ammunition. It seems to be dawning upon the heathen that it is not the prayers so much as it is the machine shop and laboratory that have made Christian civilization so difficult for the benighted to resist.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The announcement from Washington to the effect that Dr. Amos P. Wilder, editor of the Madison Journal, is slated for a good appointment in the diplomatic service, will be interesting reading to those gentlemen who have been regarding the list of federal appointments with feelings of dismay, on account of names which it did not contain.

Fond du Lac Reporter: It has been suggested that Fond du Lac may by prompt action induce Ringling brothers to locate the winter quarters of Forepunch & Sells circus in this city. The idea is a good one and should be promptly acted upon. The location of such an institution here would be of material advantage to the city. It would bring a great many people and several hundred animals for six months in the year. Much money would be spent for their maintenance and most of it would be circulated in Fond du Lac.

Denver Post: Boost the town and you boost your business. Boost your business and you boost the town. The whole thing is selfish—but it is legitimate selfishness. This distinction between the selfishness that tears down is whether you profit by helping the city or by hurting the city. Some persons make money out of mischief to the town. The golden rule of town boosting is to make money out of booming the town.

Atchison Globe: In a certain half-civilized country they say that when a man becomes too old to each game his eldest son kills him, that this is the duty of the eldest son. But the Indians have a better way; when an Indian man becomes too old to work he takes a walk and never comes back. That saves the eldest son the trouble. But the terrible Chinese; they are the worst—they love the old and care for them tenderly. No wonder people hate the Chinese.

Philadelphia Ledger: The king has really no power—as is commonly supposed—to veto a bill which was passed through both houses of parliament. He can only exercise this privilege on the advice of his ministers, in which case it is not a merely personal act. As a matter of fact, the royal assent to a bill is given as a matter of course, and has never been refused since Queen Anne put her royal foot down on a Scotch militia bill nearly two centuries ago. In reality powerlessness is the sovereign of this matter that the author of "The English Constitution," writing of Queen Victoria, said that if the two houses unanimously send it up to her.

Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey received in audience Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia, who was presented by Minister Leishman.

America's First Naval Hero
Paul Jones (his real name was John Paul) was of Scotch birth, but he made his home in Virginia, when 12 years old. He entered the revolutionary navy as a lieutenant on Dec. 22, 1775. In command of the sloop Providence, and later of the Albatross, he captured many British merchantmen along the coast from Cape Breton to the Barbados.

In November, 1777, Jones sailed for Europe on the Ranger, harassed the coasting trade of Scotland, attacked the town of Whitehaven. His crew plundered the house of Lord Selkirk, but Jones bought the silver plate and restored it to Lord Selkirk.

After capturing the British sloop Drake and taking it to Brest, Jones found himself without a ship, the Ranger being ordered home. France gave him a fleet of five vessels. He christened his flagship the Bon Homme Richard. The battle between the Bon Homme Richard and the British frigate Serapis is historic in naval annals. Jones captured the Serapis with its fifty guns and 320 men.

King Louis XVI of France presented Jones with a sword of honor. Congress voted him a gold medal.

More Loaves to One Sack of

JERSEY LILY

Than Other Flour.

The fact has been proven that a sack of Jersey Lily Flour will make more loaves of bread and better bread than other flours. Take into consideration these points and couple the efficient baking ability of Rock county housewives with this and there are more good cooks around this section than in most parts of the country. The ability of these good cooks is not hampered with an inferior flour when Jersey Lily is the basis. The wonder is that any good cook will be without Jersey Lily Flour—there will be sufficient proof in a trial sack.

CITY OF THRIFT;
LACKED CULTUREPOMPEII AND JANESVILLE COM-PARED BY PROF. WRIGHT

IN A DELIGHTFUL JOURNEY

Through the Excavations of Roman Town That Lay Buried Under
Vineyards Nearly 1700 Years

Ability on the part of the speaker to bridge the gulf of centuries with a suggestion or flash of humor, establishing a community of interest between the dusty ages and intimate present-day life, contributes to the abiding charm of Prof. Theodore Lyman Wright's lectures on ancient art. Yesterday, as he wandered on his picture journey through the narrow streets of old Pompeii, Beloit and Janesville and the year 1905 were always in the middle distance before him.

He found that the Roman town before him was buried under the ashes of Vesuvius in 79 A. D. had maintained a population somewhat smaller than that claimed by Janesville, but that, unlike Janesville the city was given up entirely to business and had little culture. The people appeared to have left behind no literature, a few tablets recording the commercial transactions of Juncundus the banker being the sole offerings found thus far. Prof. Wright still hoped, however, that a complete library of the ancient classics might yet be discovered enabling the Beloit college amateurs to rejoice in additional Greek plays.

Treading the lava-blocks deeply cut by chariot wheels eighteen centuries ago and pausing from time to time to examine the ruined in the style handed down to Rome by the Etruscans, the wayfarer was not allowed to forget the danger of Vesuvius in the distance, beautiful when viewed from Naples, in the purple and gold of the setting sun, threatening and ominous in the broad daylight. An earthquake occurring just seventeen years before the eruption of the volcano had partially destroyed many of the buildings, overturning the great Corinthian columns which formed the portico of the temple of Jupiter and working much damage to the great amphitheatre where spectacles were given before 15,000 people. Near the theatre there was a smaller theatre, better preserved, and it was there that Pompeii was found, a comparatively small auditorium sufficient.

Certain striking characteristics of the Pompeian homes were noted and compared with modern substitutes. The vestibules opened to the street and instead of the door-bell there was a door-keeper's peep-hole in the wall dividing it from the atrium or hallway. Except in the bakery which every pretentious house maintained there were no chimneys. A large hole in the roof above the atrium admitted the rain and the water was caught in a large impluvium or basin sunk in the floor and conveyed to a deep cistern adjoining. Into this atrium all the living rooms opened, the doorways being hung with curtains. The kitchen was a holy place because there the sacred fire was ever burning. Paintings symbolic of the worship of the Lares and Penates, the household gods, decorated the walls. The juxtaposition of religion and work in these back rooms had its appeal and lesson.

In the bakery were to be seen the great stone mills for grinding corn, the ovens, and the utensils exactly as they were left on the day of destruction over eighteen centuries ago. The speaker described a parent kneader used by the Pompeians which was not unlike the one just coming into use. The baker and his wife sometimes had their pictures painted or traced and like the modern who has his photo taken with a book in hand and other literary surroundings, the wife is seen with a stylus pressed to her lips and, showing that the same inclination to pose as something one is not is observable in all ages in the decorations of some of the houses—the straight lines, the rectangular panels of the walls, the absence of unnecessary furniture reminded the speaker forcibly of the art nouveau introduced by the German and Belgian rooms at the St. Louis exposition. Certain houses visited displayed tendencies quite the contrary, the rococo displacing simple methods in canopies and other furnishings. The paintings set into or frescoed on the walls frequently showed great dramatic power and the fanciful figures of dogs and other creatures worked with the little black and white tesserae into the pavements at the entrance showed that the ancients well understood the principle of killing the object when it is re-presented in this style of decoration—that is, of not having it too conventional, or real. One would not care to step on a too life-like picture of a watch-dog.

The temple of Isis, where Bulwer's wicked priest officiated in "The Last Days of Pompeii," the great baths with their rooms heated through low walls and hot and cold water supplied through lead pipes, and finally the street of tombs leading from the gate of Hercules, were visited, the last glance of the spectator being directed to a beautiful marble statue of Hermes who conducts the dead to another world and whose winged sandals give hope of another life higher up than the smoke of Vesuvius. It was Prof. Wright's final lecture for this year before the Janesville Art League.

Rev. Ramsey Preaches Here: At the morning service at St. Peter's church tomorrow, Rev. Prof. Alfred Ramsey of the Chicago Lutheran Theological seminary will preach. Lucky George: George W. Wise of Janesville was a guest at the editor's home the first of the week. George was out amongst the ducks, bright and early Monday morning and after a hard day's work succeeded in bagging one little aquatic fowl. That too is one better than the editor did.—Stoughton Courier.

NO UNITED STAND
FOR OPEN-SHOPMaster Carpenter Declares That No
Agreement Exists — Dogs
Not Anticipate Strike.

Reports that the local contractors have all entered an agreement to operate under the open shop system after May 1 and have further decided to stand out against granting the raise of five cents an hour asked for the first of the year, are declared to be erroneous by the head of one of the firms engaged in this kind of work. The contractors some time ago gave their answers to the requests made by the union carpenters and no official answer had been received. The possibility of a strike is declared to be remote. Blair & Summers claim to be operating successfully under the open shop system. Among the painters no important steps toward a settlement seems to have been taken. The master painters claim that they are gradually filling the places of the strikers.

NEXT SABBATH
IS PALM SUNDAYCHURCHES WILL OBSERVE THE DAY BY SPECIAL SERVICES.

HOLY WEEK WILL FOLLOW

Easter Will Be the Occasion for Much Religious Celebrating—
Late This Year.

Tomorrow is Palm Sunday and the occasion will be observed with fitting ceremony in the various churches of the city. Particularly in the Episcopal and Catholic churches, where the observance of Lent has been strict will the significance of Palm Sunday, the one joyous day in the gloomy Lenten season—the day observed in commemoration of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem on the Sunday preceding the passion—be duly recognized. In both the Catholic and Protestant churches the services will be brightened by special music and symbolic ceremonial.

While the services on the whole will be joyous a somber undertone is given to them, especially in the Catholic churches, according to the prescribed ritual for the day, by the reading of the account of the passion from the gospel of St. Matthew. It is important that the significance of the solemn story should not be lost—the story of the change from the popular favor of that first Palm Sunday, of the betrayal, and the sufferings and the crucifixion of the Christ.

Palms Used in Higher Service

In commemoration of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem and of the waving of the palms and branches which accompanied the joyous shouts of Hosanna, by which he was welcomed, the blessing and the distribution of palms forms an important part of the higher order of service. The blessing and distribution of the palms precedes the high mass and during the mass the strips of blessed palm are held reverently in the right hands of the worshippers. At the close of the service, as the crowds of worshippers stream out into the streets the long, trailing strips of green which they carry distinguish the attendants at the liturgical churches from worshippers at other churches. The crowds that throng the streets during the day the glimpses that are had now and then or the bits of consecrated palms, twisted by their owners into the form of a cross and worn fastened on the dress or the lapel of the coat, serve as reminders of the day and its religious significance.

Palmetto Palms

The old custom of commemorating the day by distributing strips of cedar has disappeared entirely in the city churches and the palmetto palm is used exclusively. The mature leaf of the palmetto which is from three to six feet long, is very narrow, but very thick, being formed of close folds. The long strip which is distributed is one of the folds of a single leaf. The folds can be separated easily, each leaf furnishing from eight to ten strips.

Holy Week Begins Sunday

With Palm Sunday will commence the holy week, lasting from the sixteenth to the twenty-third of Easter. During this week those religiously inclined will observe it by daily attendance at church and the absolute abstinence from meat of any kind. Special services will be held on the twelfth, Good Friday, the day which commemorates the crucifixion. But the joyous Easter Sunday, a week away, will be the important occasion for services in the churches and will bring to a close the period of sackcloth and ashes.

Came From the East to Rock Prairie About Sixty Years Ago—

Deceased came to Rock Prairie from the east about sixty years ago and his life from that time has been passed there, at Clinton and in Beloit. He leaves to mourn his death a widow, two sons—C. J. M'Michaels, of Iowa, and Frank M'Michaels, of Beloit, and two daughters—Mrs. Williams, of Beloit, and Miss Mamie, M'Michaels of Milwaukee. BILL PROVIDING FOR
NEW MUNICIPAL COURT

Which Beloit Wants Established in Its Borders, Has Been Re-
drawn by Sen. Whitehead.

At the request of the Beloit parties interested, Senator Whitehead has redrawn the bill providing for the establishment of a municipal court in that city. The first bill offered called for a court that would have power to try cases where amounts ranging up to $2,000 would be involved—larger jurisdiction than the court in Janesville which cannot try cases where more than $500 is involved. If the new bill passes Beloit will have a court of the same powers as Janesville and a judge of its own selection.

MISS MARY JONES
WEDS MR. BRADLEY

Former Janesville Residents Are Wedded in Beloit at Noon
Today.

A quiet wedding took place at high noon today in St. Paul's church, Beloit, when Michael H. Bradley and Miss Mary Frances Jones were united in holy matrimony. Only a few intimate friends were present. The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Henry J. Purdue. Miss Jones and Mr. Bradley obtained their marriage permit at County Clerk Lee's office this morning and after obtaining a special permit, allowing them to waive the five-day clause, from Judge Fifield, Miss Jones and Mr. Bradley returned to Beloit on the eleven o'clock car, arriving there shortly before twelve. They went at once to St. Paul's church where the ceremony was performed, and left on the twelve-thirty train for Milwaukee, where they will spend their honeymoon.

TOBACCO MARKET
CONTINUES QUIETMore Leaf Will Probably Be Grown
in Rock County This Year
Than in 1904.

There are several things that will be instrumental in enlarging the tobacco growing area in Rock county this year. The crop of nineteen four and nearly all the old leaf has been taken from the producers' hands at a fair price this season and the favorable average price paid during the handling time augurs good for an increase in the amount of tobacco to be grown. The warehousemen are still looking for all that is purchasable and anything that will serve as blinder stock is in great demand. The markets are becoming quiet steadily and in the past week the amount of new goods received exceeded the amount shipped. Few movements are recorded. J. A. Ryan shipped 2 cars of low grade to Pittsburgh people; Rumrill sold 143 boxes of 1902; M. F. Green shipped six cars 1903, bought a car of old leaf composed of 1897 to 1901. S. Grundy received at Sun Prairie Monday and Tuesday, J. B. Dearborn, a dealer in leaf tobacco in this city for a number of years, has sold out his stock to local dealers and intends soon to make a tour of inspection in Oklahoma and may locate there.

That lot of household stuff you have tumbled over in the attic every year—the odds and ends of several seasons' accumulation—can be turned to account right now. There are any number of people who are anxious to buy the very thing you would be glad to part with. A Gazette want ad will find them. 3 lines 3 times, 25c.

...Forty Years Ago...

Yesterday was the fortieth anniversary of one of the saddest events in American history—the shooting of President Lincoln in a box at Ford's theatre in Washington—and today marks the end of two score years since the great war President succumbed to the fatal pistol wound in his head. The Daily Gazette of Saturday, April 15, 1865, contains two columns of telegraphic news concerning the terrible tragedy, and the heavy black rules of mourning were used throughout the paper. The telegraphic news of the double crime—the assassination of Secretary of State Seward—is reproduced in full in the "Forty Years Ago" department today. The assassin of Lincoln is one place called Hicks Booth. The man proved to be J. Wilkes Booth and was captured twelve days later, being driven from a swamp with an accomplice by the name of Harrold, to a barn and the building fired. In attempting to escape here he was shot in the head by Sergeant Corbett, and after three hours died. After the triumphant cry of the assassin from the stage and the situation had been realized, Lincoln was carried to a private residence opposite the theatre and there died the following morning. This building is now occupied as a Lincoln museum, many relics of the martyred President having been collected for exhibit there. The room in which Lincoln died is carefully preserved. It is on the first floor near the kitchen.

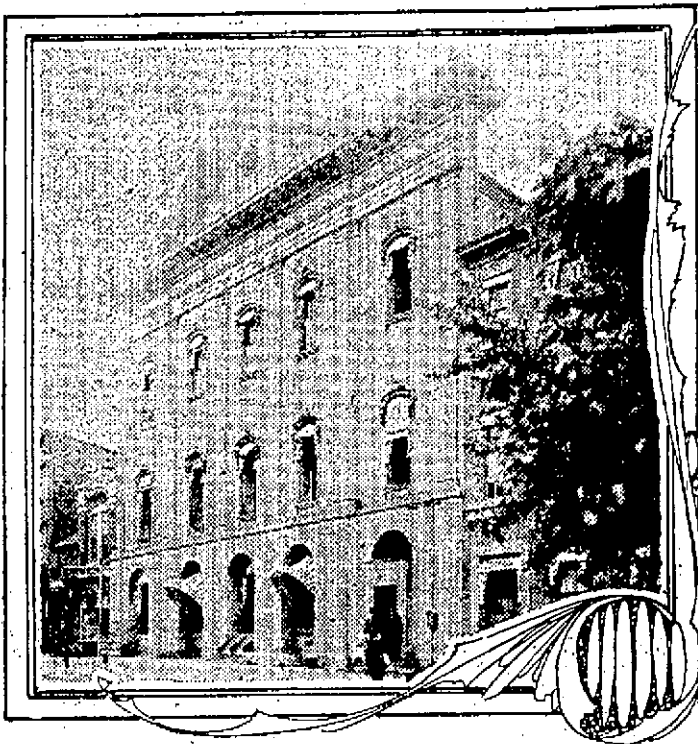

E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

War Department, Washington,
April 15.—Maj. Gen. Dix: Abraham Lincoln died this morning at 22 minutes after 7 o'clock.

(Signed) E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

THE ASSASSINATION.

Washington, April 15.—President

FORD'S THEATRE, WHERE PRESIDENT LINCOLN WAS SHOT

and not even the paper on the theatre walls has been changed.

In a dispatch with a Chicago date-line, it is stated that Secretary Seward died also, but this report proved to be incorrect and it will be remembered by those who lived at the time and all students of history that the statesman lived to serve in the cabinet that he acted among Lincoln's advisors. He died after two years of retirement from public life at his home in Auburn in 1872. His son, Frederick, also recovered from his injuries.

All the nation mourned the death of Lincoln and his funeral train was one of the most sorrowful corteges that ever followed a corpse to the grave. Of all the official pallbearers at the funeral only two now live, Henry C. Worthington of Cumberland, Md., and Alexander H. Coffroth of Somerset, Pa. Both were members of the house of representatives at the time, the former representing a Nevada district.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, April 15, 1865.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

War Department, April 14.—11 a. m.—Maj. Gen. Dix: This evening at about 9:30 o'clock at Ford's Theatre, the President, while sitting in his private box with Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Rogers and Major Rathbun, was shot by an assassin who suddenly entered the box and approached behind the President. The assassin then leaped upon the stage, brandishing a large dagger or knife, and made his escape in the rear of the theatre. The pistol ball entered the back of the President's head and penetrated nearly through the head. The wound is mortal. The President has been insensible ever since it was inflicted and is now about dying. About the same hour an assassin, whether it is the same or not is not known, entered Mr. Seward's apartments, and under pretence of having a prescription, was shown to the secretary's sick chamber. The assassin immediately rushed to the bed and inflicted several stabs in the throat and two on the face. It is hoped the wounds may not be mortal. My apprehension is that he will prove fatal. The nurse examined Fred Seward, who was in the adjoining room, and hastened to his father's room where he met the assassin who inflicted upon him one or more dangerous wounds. The recovery of Fred Seward is doubtful. It is not probable that the President will live through the night. Gen. Grant and wife were advertised to be at the theatre this evening, but he started for Burlington at six o'clock this evening.

At a cabinet meeting at which Gen. Grant was present, the subject of the state of the country and the prospect of a speedy peace was discussed. The President was cheerful and hopeful and spoke very kindly of Gen. Lee and others of the Confederacy and of the establishment of a government in Virginia. All the members of the cabinet except Mr. Seward were now in attendance upon the President. Shaw has seen Mr. Seward, but he and Frederick were both unconscious.

E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

War Department, 4:10 a. m., April 15.—To Maj. Gen. Dix: The President continues insensible and is sinking. Secretary Seward remains without change. Frederick Seward's skull is fractured in two places besides a severe cut on the head. The attendant is still alive but hopeless. Mr. Seward's wounds are not dangerous. It is now ascertained with reasonable certainty that two assassins were engaged in the horrible crimes, Hicks Booth being the one that shot the President, and the other being an accomplice of his whose name is not known but whose description is so clear that he can hardly escape. It appears from a letter found in Booth's trunk that the murder was planned before the 4th of March but fell through then because the accomplice backed out until Richmond could be freed from Booth and his accomplice were at the lively stable last evening about six o'clock and left there with their horses about ten o'clock, or shortly before that hour. It would seem that they had for several days been watching their chance, but for some unknown reason it was not carried into effect until last evening. One of them has evidently made his way to Baltimore. The other has not yet been traced.

E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

When the excitement of the theatre was at its height, the report was circulated that Secretary Seward had also been assassinated. On reaching this gentleman's residence a crowd and a military guard were around its doors, and on entering it was ascertained that the reports were based on truth. Everybody there was so excited that scarcely an intelligible word could be gathered.

The facts are substantially as follows: About ten o'clock a man rang a bell and the call having been answered by a colored servant, he said he came from Dr. Vide, Secretary Seward's family physician, with a prescription, at the same time showing in his hand a small piece of folded paper, and saying in answer to a refusal that he must see the secretary as he was interested in the particular directions concerning the medicine. He insisted upon going up though repeatedly informed that no one could enter the chamber. He pushed the servant to one side and walked heavily toward the secretary's room. He was there met by Fred Seward, of whom he demanded to see the Secretary, making the same representations that he did to the servant. What further passed in the way of colloquy is not known, but the man struck him on the head with a billy severely injuring the skull, and finding him almost senseless, the assassin then rushed into the chamber and attacked Mr. Seward. The paymaster in the U. S. army, Mr. Tamm, a messenger in the state department, and the nurses were present. He then rushed upon the Secretary who was lying in bed in the same room and inflicted three stabs in the neck. He bled profusely. The assassin ran down stairs, mounted his horse at the door and rode off before the alarm could be sounded and in the same as the assassin of the President.

Secretary Stanton and other prominent officers of the government called at Secretary Seward's house to enquire into his condition and there heard of the assassination of the President. They then proceeded to the house where he was lying exhibiting, of course, intense anxiety and solemnity. An immense crowd was gathered in front of the President's home. A strong guard was also stationed there, many persons evidently believing that he would be brought home.

The city tonight presents a scene of wild excitement, accompanied by violent expressions of indignation and profoundest sorrow. Many shed tears. The military authorities have dispatched mounted patrols in every direction in order, if possible, to arrest the assassin. The whole metropolitan police are likewise vigilant for the same purpose.

The attacks at both the theatre and Secretary Seward's house took place at the same time, about 10 o'clock, thus showing a preconcerted plan to assassinate those gentlemen.

Conclusive evidence of the guilt of the party who attacked the President are in possession of the board of police. Vice President Johnson is in the city and his headquarters are being guarded by troops.

Chicago, April 15.—11 a. m.—A dispatch just received here states that Secretary Seward died at 9:30 this morning.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ.

CHAPTER I.

ALL the long Sabbath day a mist hung over the mountain so heavy and gray that twilight came on almost unperceived. In the quiet old English village of Cragenstone, situated near the topmost peak of this particular mountain, the early evening services were just being completed in the meeting house, a wooden structure that stood prominently on an elevation of rocks and sand in the center of the village, with its sharp steeples rising dark and stern above the shadows of the gathering gloom. Droning voices chanting an anthem were heard. Then the door was opened and the congregation flocked out in reverent silence down the rocky pathways leading to their several homes, nodding seriously to each other when the time of parting came.

The solemn stillness of a Puritan Sabbath day pervaded the atmosphere, and all felt its influence, from old Father Parrish, with homespun suit and gray wool stockings, leaning heavily on his staff, to pretty Hetty Taunton, who walked slowly at her mother's side, forcing a look of seriousness on her dimpled face and dropping her eyelids demurely to cover the brightness of her sparkling eyes as she passed young Simon Kemper, who stood waiting at the door, his gaze intent upon her. Mistress Taunton, her best gray bonnet projecting well over her austere countenance and tied securely under her chin, rested her hand proudly on the arm of her son Josiah, who, tall, spare and grim visaged, strode on in silence, the grave solemnity of his manner giving evidence of his firm belief in the strict and narrow teachings of the Puritan sect to which he belonged.

The mist of the day had lifted, and through the breaking clouds overhead an early evening star was bravely endeavoring to send down a gleam to lighten the path of the wayfarer when mother and son entered the gateway before their home, a low, rambling farmhouse built securely of logs and cement. Pausing at the door, Mistress Taunton, with her hand on the latch, bent forward and looked down the dark roadway with a searching glance. "Hetty! That trifling maid!" she exclaimed in a tone of vexation. "I should not have granted her request to walk with Cynthia Cammett, for I might have known the twain would loiter on the way, indulging in idle chatter and forgetting the holy day."

"Fret not, mother," Taunton said in a repellent voice, harsh and discordant, "and enter, for I am chilled with the dampness of the night. No harm can befall the girl, who doth but desire to exchange greetings, quietly with her friends."

Accustomed to do her son's bidding at the slightest word, his mother lifted the latch, and soon the flickering light of several candles disclosed the living room of the farmhouse—the large kitchen. Throwing his hat and cloak on a bench near at hand, Taunton sank into a seat on the high backed settle in the chimney place, stretching out his legs shiveringly to receive the heat from the burning logs, observing his mother's movements in silence as she removed her bonnet and cap, then drew forward a small pine table, scrubbed to shining whiteness, and laid a Bible upon it. Seeing that she was about to become absorbed in reading the customary evening chapter, he observed suddenly, with an ill concealed attempt at carelessness, "Our cousin Margaret must be on her way by now, mother."

A Serious Mistake.

It is a serious thing to neglect your heart.

The moment you detect any weakness or irregularity, such as short breath after exercise, palpitation, fluttering, weak or hungry spells, pain in breast, side or shoulder, or uneasiness when lying on left side, you should take Dr. Miles' Heart Cure; it rarely ever fails to relieve all these symptoms.

If not promptly restored, chronic heart disease soon develops, and then it only remains for some sudden strain to completely exhaust the heart.

Thousands of hopeless cases have been cured, and if you do not try it, it will be the greatest mistake of your life.

"When I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure I was in a very bad condition. I had stomach trouble, with severe distress after eating. My heart hurt me, and I had shortness of breath, palpitation. My pulses were irregular, and my feet, ankles and hands were swollen. Every month at regular periods I had severe pain. I wrote Dr. Miles Medical Co., and they advised me to take Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. I continued the medicine until I was completely cured. I feel like a different person. In fact I have not felt so well for 20 years."

"Her missive sent to us by special messenger doth state that she arrived safely in London," his mother replied, lifting her glance from the page, "and that she would proceed on her way speedily. The frost coming out of the roads and recent heavy rains combine to make traveling tedious, as thou dost know, Josiah. But I expect within the week to welcome thy cousin back to the village of her birth."

She shook her head, sighing dolefully. "I wot 'twill be but a sad homecoming for the maid, with no father here to greet her."

"Her house and lands are in readiness for her to take possession," Josiah interposed gravely.

"Aye, thou hast been a good steward, my son," she replied, "since thine uncle, showing rare wisdom in his dying hour, chose thee to manage his daughter's estate."

She sat erect in her chair, speaking earnestly.

"For who in this rocky country hath broader pasture lands, better sheep and cattle, finer horseflesh, an whose hirelings are trained to labor with more economy and speed? In the two years thou hast been in charge of her estate, Josiah, thou hast proved thyself untiring in thy zeal and worthy."

"I had my yearly stipend that was not ungenerous, mother."

"Thou hast been faithful and zealous for thy cousin's interests," his mother asserted, "with stern emphasis, disregarding his observation entirely, 'an' thou should have a reward, my son. Forsooth, thou art entitled to a rich reward," she repeated.

The ungainly fellow moved uneasily on the settle, a dull red glow of color mounting to his forehead.

"Lately I ha' thought," he said, with slight hesitation, "that mayhap our cousin Margaret would be much changed after her long sojourn in France. Belike she may return to find us dull and our ways too quiet for her taste. Have such thoughts e'er come to thy mind, mother?"

"Nay, not to speak of," she replied, "for I know that thy cousin will realize her obligations to thee and unless her early teachings are entirely swept away will heed the advice of her aunt and listen to her counsels with respect."

She raised her hand and shook her finger sternly.

"But think not it was with my consent that Andrew Mayland sent Margaret away to his sister in Paris," she said, "there to remain until she was twenty-one. I tell thee, Josiah, that Andrew wrought his only child, who should have been raised there in yonder gray-stone house, built by her grandfather, and allowed to grow to womanhood among her own kind and in the God fearing ways of her kinsfolk. Education, forsooth! Can Hetty not read and write and do her numbering skillfully? Prithee, 'tis enough knowledge for a maid! As my good father, now dead, hath often said, 'Fill thy daughter's heart with a dread of sin, raise her in fear of the wrath of the Lord, an' thou hath done thy duty.'"

Josiah acquiesced by an emphatic movement of his head. "Mother," he said, recurring again to the subject of his cousin Margaret, "I ha' been thinking much on the coming home of our kinswoman. Often my mind hath dwelt upon her youth and inexperience. What knoweth she of the care of a household, and the management of so many acres as are hers entirely now? I—thou—she hesitated—"we must keep close to her, direct her endeavors, and from the first—he raised his voice, speaking with harsh emphasis—"allow no other influence to crowd in to push ours out. On our counsel she must be taught to rely, and she must ever find us to be towers of strength upon which she may lean with confidence."

"Thou hast spoken wisely, Josiah," the dame replied. "If my memory doth serve me well, Margaret was ever an obedient child to her father, so will come naturally, methinks, to place reliance on her kinsfolk. Hast thought, Josiah," she continued, lowering her voice almost to a whisper and looking toward the door, "that thy cousin's lands adjoin thine and what great benefit could be derived from being master of it all?"

Taunton rose and paced rapidly up and down the dimly lighted kitchen. "Thought! Of course I ha' thought!" he exclaimed. "For two years I have watched over everything on the Mayland farm lands, from the littlest vernal lamb to the fleetest horse, and given orders as if I were the owner there."

He drew a sharp breath. "And now—God's pity—I must give place to a child of a girl, who happen will bring disorder where I ha' had order and put wasteful French notions above good Puritan thrift and care."

As if the thought were intolerable to him, he gave his shoulders a despairing shrug, strode to the window and looked out long and silently over the blackened landscape in the direction of the Mayland estate. His mother sat for a time looking with sympathetic anxiety at the tall, discolorated figure of her son. At last she observed quietly: "In doing thy duty so well thou hast grown to love those lands above all reasoning. Josiah, methinks by every right thou shouldst be master there."

"Mother," he came and stood before her, with his hand upraised, in a state of unusual excitement, "I dreamt last night that the vessel on which Margaret Mayland sailed from Paris was lost with all on board, and my cousin, she who stands between me and the estate, for I am the next heir, as thou doth know, was gone forever. It was a dream, but for a night all was mine. I was in truth master there, and I lived. I was rich in this world's goods, busy, important, prosperous."

His pale blue eyes glittered covetously with the feeling that possessed him as he brushed his hand over his hair. "Ha, an' were it so 't would be well!" Mistress Taunton cried sharply. "provided, of course, it were the good Lord's will," she added piously. "But there are other ways, my son. Hast thou given consideration to the fact that Margaret will need a husband now? An' who more suitable than thou, Josiah?"

He shuffled nervously on his feet, unable to meet her glance.

"Dost think she would regard my suit with favor?" he asked. "Although an upright an' honorable man, I ha' never thought I had much attractiveness for a woman."

His mother threw up her head with a quick motion, her glance containing both pride and confidence.

"Aye, that she will, Josiah," she announced emphatically. "Of a truth, thou'rt not oversoft with woman, but thou art so tall and doth walk about with such an air an' stride, that I woen, scarce a maid thou didst set thy heart on could resist thee."

"If it be that my cousin hath an eye to her purse strings," he observed thoughtfully, "my frugal and thrifty management of her farm lands may appeal to her."

"Those facts and others to thine advantage will be placed before our kinswoman with proper judgment and skill upon her arrival," his mother announced. "My son, thou dost know that 'tis thine own lookout to win thy Cousin Margaret, for 'tis ever a man's place to do the courting, but that I will keep a close shadow and watch well for thee and thine interests thou canst not doubt. Ah, welladay," she drew a deep breath, "'twill be a happy time for thy mother, Josiah, when she can sit before yon doorway at her spinning and, over and anon raising her eyes to look at the wide acres of green pasture surrounded by the gray house on the hill, know that thou art master there."

Taunton, looking intently into space with covetous eyes, made no reply.

Soon the candles having burned almost to their sockets and the bright flare of the logs given place to dull blackness, emitting a few dying sparks, Mistress Taunton bethought herself of the lateness of the hour.

"Hetty, not come in!" she exclaimed, walking to the window and looking out with impatient anxiety. "Ah, I hear her voice!"

Then throwing open the door she cried sharply: "Hetty, come in! 'Tis unseemly for a maid to be dawdling out of doors on a Sabbath evening. Thou shouldst be at thy prayers! Who is it thou hast with thee?"

"Only Simon, mother."

The merry faced little creature in her severe gray bonnet and plain dress of homespun came forward hurriedly. "As I was returning from leaving Cynthia Cammett at the gate I met Simon near the turnstile, and he ventured to walk with me. Be not angry, mother," as the woman, towering above her, frowned wrathfully, "Prithee, a little gossip with good Simon would not hurt a maid!"

"Gossip on the Lord's day! Light and trifling talk on a Sabbath night!" her mother cried in stern rebuke. "And think not that sounds of thy wicked laughter did not reach mine ears! To thy room, hussy! Nay, let the candle remain," as Hetty lifted one from the table. "In darkness canst thou better put thy mind on thy prayers and ask the Lord's forgiveness for thy sins?"

Then shutting the door with intentional violence upon the retreating form of the young farmer she fastened the wooden bolts securely for the night.

SPOTTED FEVER?

20 to 50 per cent, varying with different epidemics and with the age of the person affected. The mortality among young children is about 75 per cent. Among those in later childhood 53 per cent, and among the adolescent 35 per cent. In the Boston epidemic of 1896 and 1897, the mortality in 111 cases was 68.5 per cent. In some cases recovery is very slow and likely to be complicated by relapses and various sequelae. There is a special tendency for this disease among young children to lead to deaf-mutism.

Germs Discovered.
The disease is caused by a germ which was discovered in 1887 and was named after its discoverer, Micrococcus Weichselbaumii. This germ is a dumb-bell shaped micro-organism which grows in the spinal cord and brain and produces an acute inflammation. This germ can be grown outside of the body on artificial culture media, and when it is inoculated into some of the lower animals as the dog and goat under certain conditions, it produces symptoms similar to those which occur in man. It is still an open question how this germ gets into the system. One theory is that the germ grows in the nose and is carried from there to the nervous tissues through the blood or lymph channels. This idea is based on the facts that an inflammation of the nasal mucous frequently accompanies the disease and also that this germ has been found a considerable number of times in the nasal secretions of those suffering from the disease.

How the Disease Spreads.
Occasional instances indicate that the disease may be contagious. In the Boston epidemic several instances were noted where two cases came from the same house and family. The general opinion, however, is that it is not a contagious disease. Under ordinary conditions it is rarely possible to note any connection between the various cases which frequently appear simultaneously and in widely separated localities, between which there have been no known means of communication. Some hold the theory that man shares the disease with some of the lower animals, and that is from them he becomes infected.

Means of Prevention.
During an epidemic it is well, where possible, to treat the disease as a contagious one and under these conditions the patient should be isolated for a period of fourteen days. As further means of preventing the disease an attempt should be made on the part of all in an infected locality to maintain a high degree of vitality and to avoid excessive muscular and mental labor, both of which are recognized as important predisposing causes, and to avoid all exposures to cold and wet.

Since it is possible that this organism gains entrance to the system through the nose, it seems likely that occasional nasal douches of a mild antiseptic would be of value in preventing the disease.

of Janesville Chautauqua Association—Incorporate Monday.

At a meeting held at the Hotel Myers last evening the Janesville Chautauqua association elected Rev. W. A. Goebel president, and Jesse C. Kline, secretary. The organization will be regularly incorporated without capital and as a non-money-making institution on Monday and contracts now existing in verbal form with H. M. Holbrook of Chicago, will be put in writing. All of which means that the Chautauqua is now assured. It will be opened on the Mole property on the west bank of the river about a quarter of a mile beyond the end of the street car line, on July 28 and will continue ten days. Public spirited business men and interested citizens have already subscribed for 800 season tickets and Supt. H. C. Buell announced last night that he would dispose of 150 more. Besides these there are 40 additional ones which purchasers have partially agreed to take. The total to be sold is only 1,200. The sum of $1,800 will be expended on the program which will consist of 73 entertainments by the talent announced in last Saturday's Gazette. The Western Passenger association has agreed to grant a one and one-third fare rate during the session. The last three days of the Janesville assembly's session will be the first three days of the Delavan assembly. Otherwise there will be no conflict with neighboring enterprises of the kind. H. M. Holbrook will be in general charge of the entire affair and Dr. Roland Dwight Grant will preside over the destinies of the program.

SOCIALISM STIRS UP MORMONS

World Convention of Latter-Day Saints
Indulges in Lively Debate.

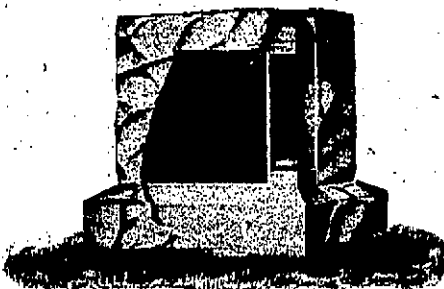

Lamoni, Iowa, April 15.—The offer of resolutions proposing measures for a practical system of socialism aroused a lively discussion in the world convention of the Reorganized Church of Latter-Day Saints here. The resolutions provide, first, for the economic equality of all employees of the church and later the institution of the system whereby all members would likewise be placed on basis of economic equality. Efforts to get the resolutions before the body were unsuccessful, but the temper of the delegates is for free discussion and the matter may be had. Socialistic sentiment is growing within the church and some leaders predict that experiment will be tried before long.

THE SLEEVELESS BOLERO AND DOUBLE SKIRT

Quite a few novel features, or, perhaps, it were nearer the truth to call them revivals, characterize the new gowns; and among these the sleeveless bolero is sure of an enthusiastic welcome. The model—a silk henrietta in a pretty shade of geranium red that tones on the raspberry. The bolero is built with rounded corners, and attached to a bodice of silk of the same tone, which is disposed with deep shirings in the center, back and front, making a charming swathed effect. The bolero is built out over the shoulder, and the sleeves of cloth are attached to the silk bodice. Velvet ribbon edging the bolero; and velvet-covered buttons are attached to soutache loops and follow the course of the velvet ribbon edging. The sleeve is a very full double puff, ending well below the elbow, with a shallower puff at the wrist, and each puff being separated from the other with a flaring upstanding cuff. The skirt is in tunic or double effect, both with side pleats that are stitched down for some inches, and not pressed below the stitching. The velvet ribbon edging, and looped buttons appear on both upper and lower skirts as a flat trimming on the hem.
